Weighs The Truth is the March New Moon Clan Mother

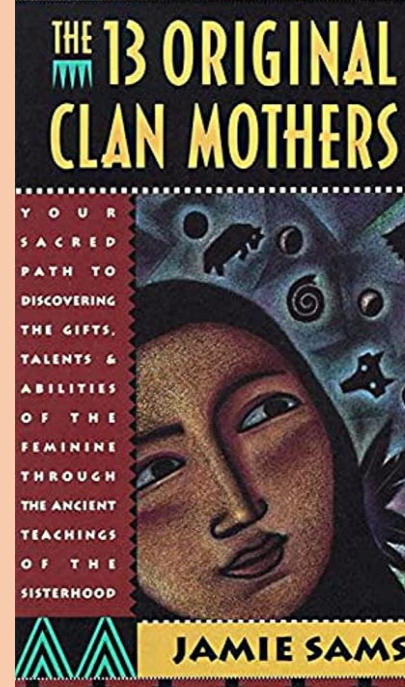

The Protectress of the meek
Weights the Truth for all to see
Divine Law, seeking balance,
Setting the spirit free.

And here, amid the chaos
Of earthly trials she stands,
Ready to issue justice,
Compassion in her hands.

She answers when deception
Shows the destructive face
Of human greed and hatred,
Dividing every creed and race.

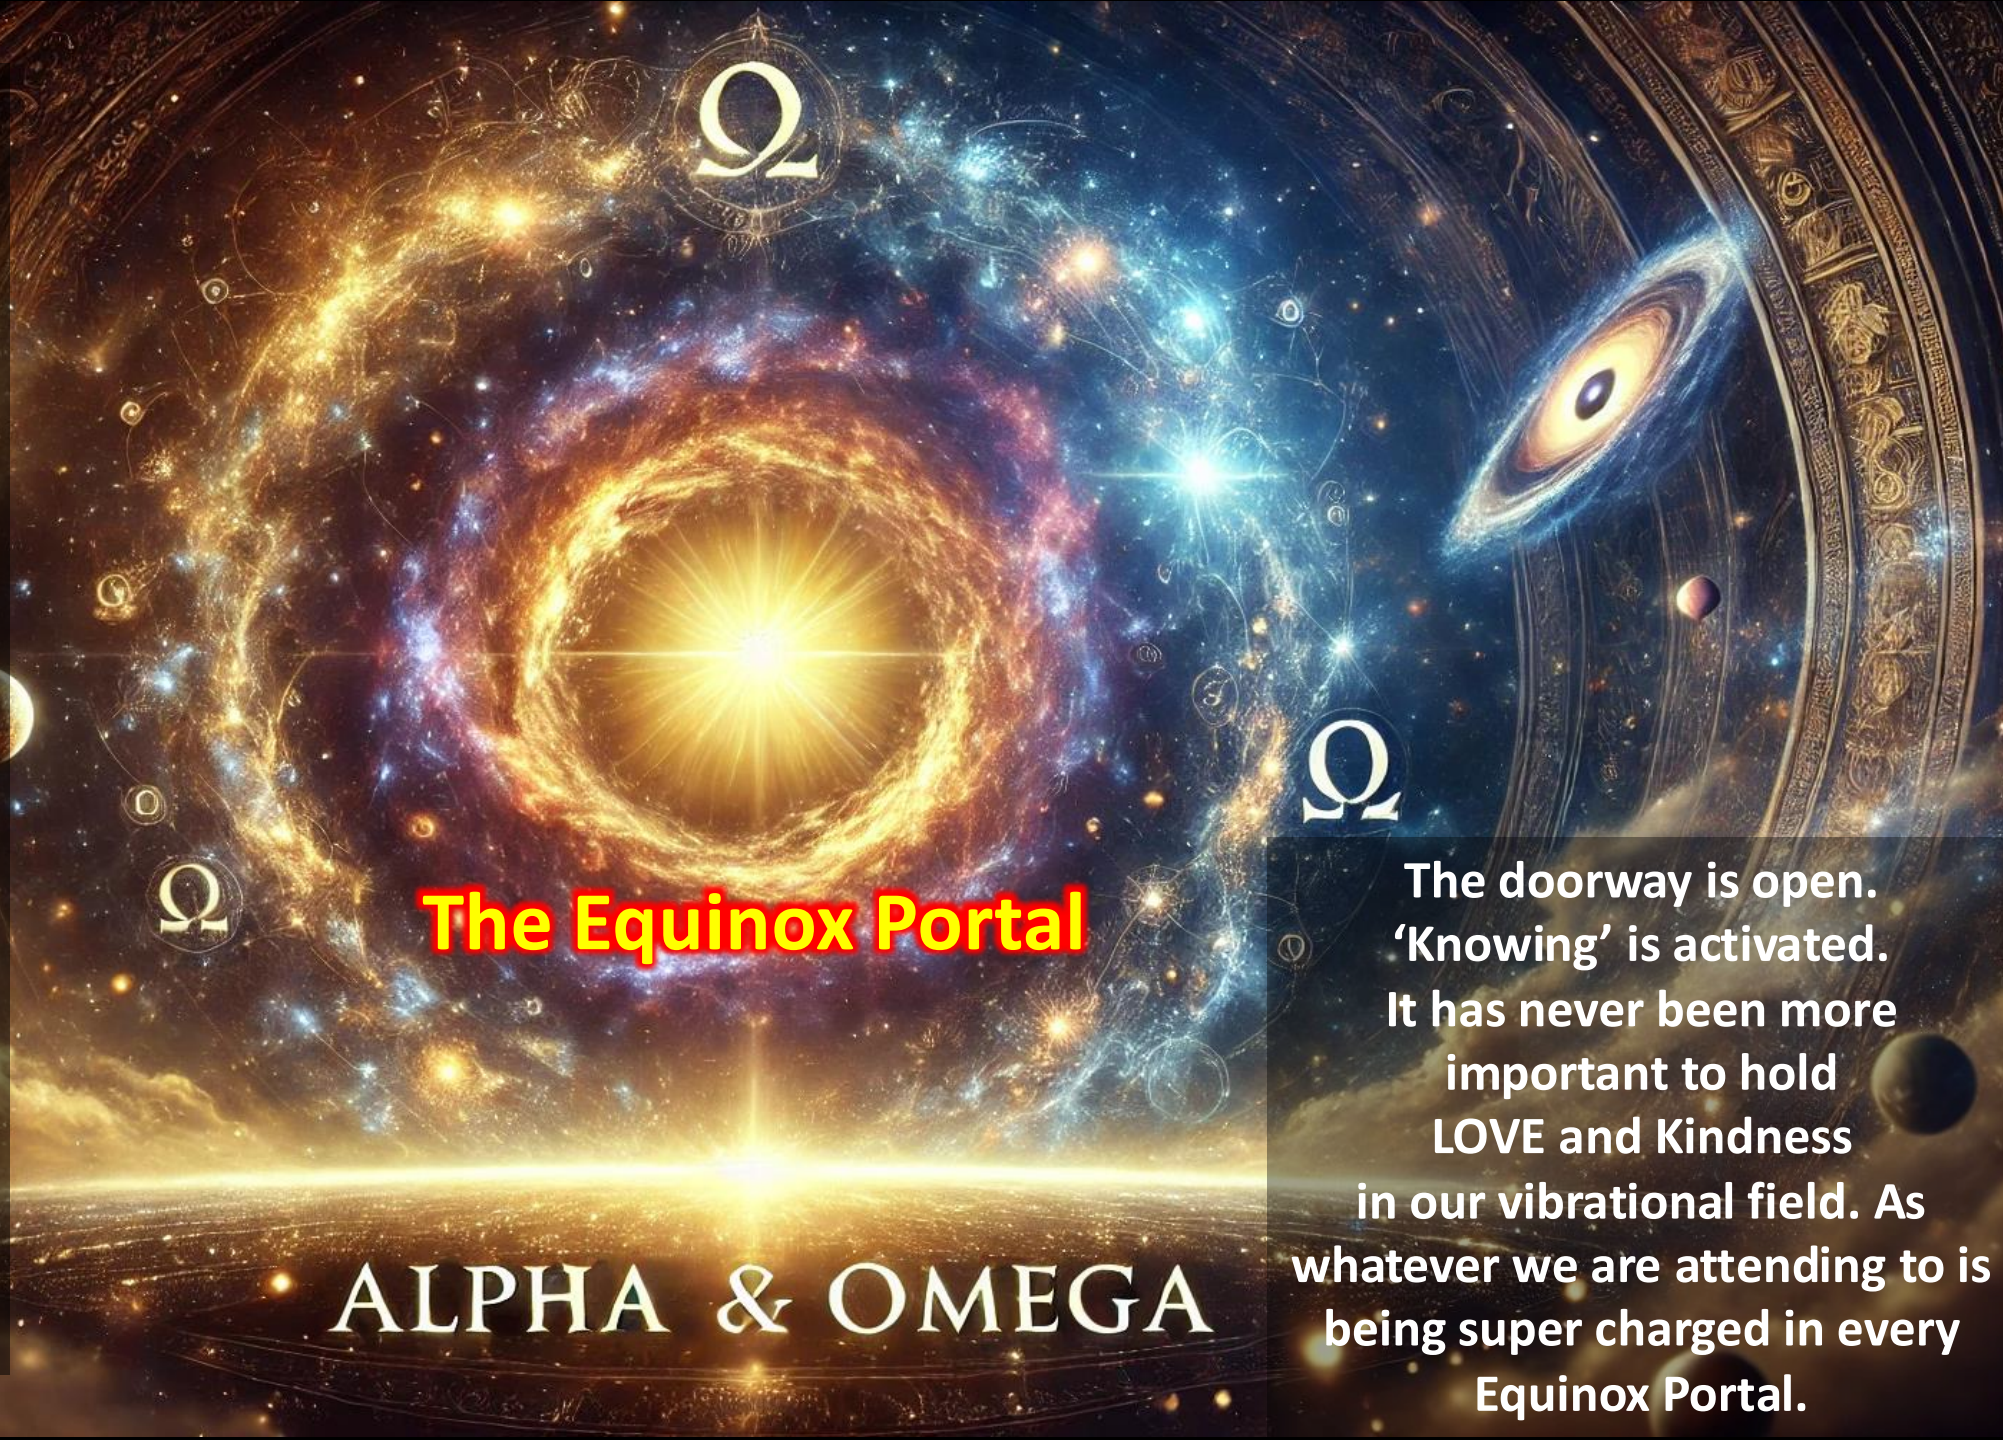

Keeper of Great Mystery's Laws,
Whose guiding ways we seek,
May we accept the oneness of
The truths we hear you speak.

- Her color is Brown connected to the Earth
- She represents and teaches Divine Law
- She is Keeper/Guardian of Justice and Equality
- She is a fair judge of human rights
- She sees all sides of a situation and is not fooled by half-truths or lies
- She teaches the ability to respond and how to be self-determined
- She teaches how to nurture the positive using divine law
- She is the Mother of self-determination and responsibility
- She teaches responsibility for our actions and words through personal integrity, ethics and values
- She teaches how to find healing solutions
- She teaches how to ACCEPT THE TRUTH

Reclaiming our Power at the Sacral Chakra with the Aries-Pisces MetaGoddess with Venus in Aries

Thru Mar 30

As Venus continues her Evening Star journey in Aries, soon to be activated by the Moon at the Sacral Chakra—she recovers her desire, creativity, and embodied expression.

Sacral chakra power is opened for reclaiming through feeling her powerful emotions, her physical strength, and the courage to create. This gate restores vitality after numbness and reawakens our life force through pleasure and authentic emotion.

It is the sacral chakra in Aries that knows:
I desire, and I have the right to create.

Aries Sacral Chakra Medicine:

Flow through creative, embodied expression

Honor desire as a compass for life force

Reclaim pleasure as a source of power

This is the sacral reclamation that moves and creates.

Reclaiming our Power at the Sacral Chakra Aries-Pisces MetaGoddess with Venus in Taurus

March 30 — April 23

As Venus begins her journey through Taurus, she activates the Sacral Chakra in a new way—through sensual presence, receptivity, and embodied pleasure.

Sacral chakra power here is reclaimed through slowness, sensuality, and the courage to receive. This gate restores vitality by reconnecting us to the body and grounding creativity in the rhythms of nature.

It is the sacral chakra in Taurus that knows:
I feel, and I have the right to enjoy being alive.

Taurus Sacral Chakra Medicine:

Slow down and inhabit the body

Honor pleasure as a source of life force

Allow creativity to grow through receptivity

This is the sacral reclamation that opens and receives.

Aries Pisces Women (The Beguines pronounced beh-GEENs) from the late 1100s for the next several hundred years.

When medieval society told women they had two choices, either marry or become a nun, thousands refused those options and created a third option that lasted hundreds of years.

When women married back then they had to surrender all legal rights, bear children, obey their husband and own nothing.

When they choose to be a nun, they had to take lifelong vows, and live behind convent walls answering to the men running the show. This option also required a dowry most families couldn't afford.

Both options required lifelong obedience to male authority. Many women of that time said NO (Aries does not like to be told what to do). These women joined together to build a revolutionary option.

In the late 1100s across Belgium, the Netherlands, France, and Germany, women began forming independent communities where they married and they weren't nuns. They were something entirely new.

They built beguinages, small houses arranged around shared courtyards and gardens. They were self-contained villages designed by and for women.

Together they followed daily spiritual practices (Pisces) they created. (very Aries Pisces). They knew how to weave and create lace that wealthy clients paid high prices to acquire. They brewed beer commercially, nursing the sick, and teaching children to read. Choosing their own path, they made a difference.

They supported themselves through their own creative labor and in many regions, they could legally own property and control their own money. Something married women absolutely could not do.

Plus, they could leave whenever they wanted. There were no permanent vows. No lifetime commitment.

Her participation was completely voluntary for as long as she choose. Otherwise, women's choices were almost never voluntary.

Church authorities were not happy about women living without male supervision, or women claiming direct spiritual experiences without priests as intermediaries.

And they were especially not happy women were writing theology without official permission.

Some Beguines became brilliant mystics whose works shaped medieval spirituality. Mechthild of Magdeburg wrote The Flowing Light of the Godhead, recording divine visions in beautiful German prose. Hadewijch of Brabant created sophisticated poetry that scholars still study today.

Marguerite Porete wrote The Mirror of Simple Souls, a profound theological work about experiencing God directly. In Paris, Marguerite was burned at the stake when she refused to recant in 1310 in Paris.

Miraculously, Marguerite's book survived. It was copied anonymously and circulated for centuries, influencing countless readers who never knew a woman wrote it.

Church officials did their best to eliminate Beguine Villages.

Male theologians wrote treatises arguing women shouldn't interpret scripture independently.

In the 13th and 14th centuries, thousands of Beguines lived across Europe in hundreds of communities flourishing in Ghent, Leuven, Cologne, Paris, Strasbourg, and dozens of other cities.

Marguerite wrote that women's Souls could speak directly to God without priests, so the Church burned her at the stake for heresy.

Widows, women whose families couldn't afford convent dowries, women who wanted contemplative religious life without permanent enclosure, and women who wanted to work, pray, learn, and live on their own terms, all joined.

The Beguines created what medieval social structures didn't offer: a space where women could work meaningfully, pursue spiritual growth, build community, and exercise genuine autonomy. (This is so Aries Pisces)

In Aries Style they didn't ask permission and didn't wait for approval. They just set out to build these communities, and the model proved so successful it spread organically despite resistance from the church.

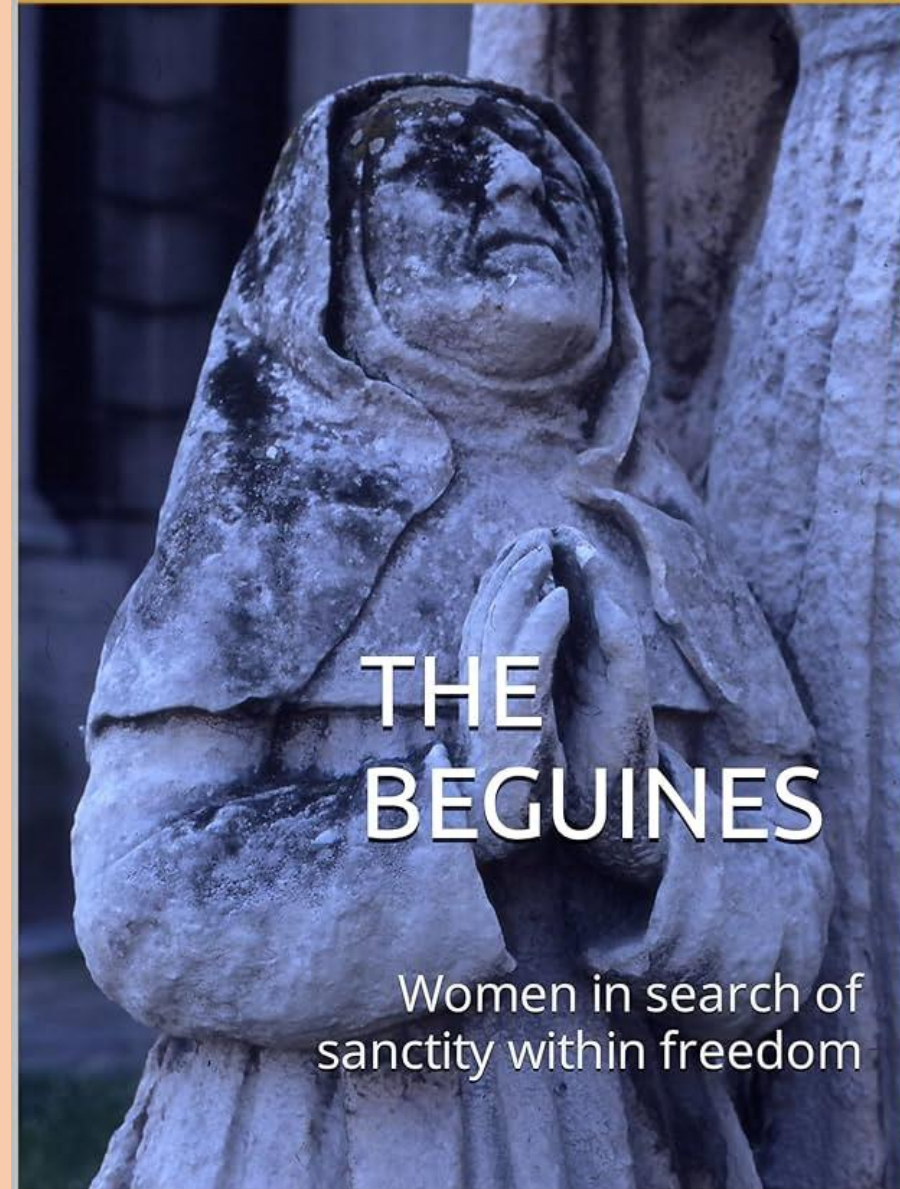

Many of these communities lasted hundreds of years. Several beguinages still stand today as UNESCO World Heritage sites. These preserved complexes are silent witnesses to centuries when these spaces held women who refused to accept only the choices men offered them.

Today walking through these historic beguinages, shows exactly what this alternative looked like: individual houses for privacy, shared courtyards for community, chapels for worship, workrooms for skilled trades, gardens for food and herbs.

The Beguines remind us that when official options are inadequate, we can create alternatives. When women (or people in general) are denied autonomy, they find ways to claim it anyway. Communities built on voluntary commitment and mutual support can thrive even in hostile environments.

The Aries Pisces Meta Goddess Reclaiming the Sacral Chakra and a Healthy Experience of Intuition

Aries Intuition occurs instantly. It is not a mental process. It is a knowing that has no logic or reason connected to it but is often spot on.

Pisces Intuition is deeply felt, an inner/felt knowing that is unexplainable and also not logical.

It is time to reclaim your knowing without knowing how you know.

Trusting and acting on feelings coming from your internal knowing/wisdom rather than from external circumstances.

When you connect with your intuition, you're connecting to your true self that has always been with you.

Practice trusting your felt, in the moment knowing by acting on what you know without knowing how you know it and trusting it is what is needed in the moment.

For example, if you are taking a walk in nature and you get a sense to go a different way than what you were planning, go for it. Then pay attention to what signs show up as confirmation.

“Intuition is really a sudden immersion of the soul into the universal current of life.” ~author Paulo Coelho

Intuition

The instant ability to understand or know something immediately (includes “gut feelings”) without the need for conscious reasoning or logical deduction.

Equinox • Sacral Chakra • Self-Connection

Creation, pleasure, emotional expression begins with connection to yourself.

Self-connection is the practice of being with yourself, returning to yourself.

Pausing.

Listening inward.

Feeling what is true for you.

A small daily ritual of presence can bring you back to your inner current — the place where creativity, feeling, and truth live.

Ask yourself:

What helps me reconnect with me?

What helps me return to myself?
